Kaleidoscope ExperienceSM Workshop

Prepare your workplace for an uncertain future.

Service Overview

Too often, the workplace evolves through guesswork, not strategic thinking. But how can it be otherwise?

After all, you can't predict the future, so how can you be expected to make reasonably accurate decisions about creating a workplace today that will support employees tomorrow?

A Kaleidoscope Experience workshop can help. Typically offered when customers visit our facilities in West Michigan, it provides a look at what might be on the horizon so you can better prepare your work environment.

What We Do

Your Kaleidoscope Experience springs from the same source as Herman Miller's products – extensive research into how people work and how they can work even better.

With the help of economists, sociologists, and business experts, we've evaluated emerging work trends to articulate three plausible futures. We'll show you a provocative glimpse of those futures in an audiovisual presentation, then discuss their possible impact on your organization.

Next, we'll share 10 propositions about the changing nature of work and the workplace, and use special voting software to help you prioritize their importance. Once you've reached consensus on those trends that most resonate with your organization, we'll help you brainstorm ways in which you can better equip your facility to adapt to what's coming.

How You Benefit

Identify trends

You'll gain a better understanding of the unpredictable kaleidoscope of shifting trends – social, technological, environmental, economic, and demographic – that are likely to influence decisions about your facilities.

Leverage research

Our conclusions are based on proven research. We don't pretend to have a crystal ball – just the next best thing.

Plan strategically

Even though you can't know the future, you can still plan for it. You'll get the insight you need to draw your own conclusions about how your workplace needs to change to be more adaptable.
